

Protection of workers' rights downgraded in Brexit withdrawal legislation

With Britain set to leave the European Union on 31 January 2020, thoughts inevitably turn to what lies ahead. Will EU workplace rights be retained and will the ECJ's judgments on workers' rights remain binding?

---

Brexit – Relocation Relocation Relocation

Arpita Dutt and Rolleen McDonnell discuss their top tips for Senior Executives when dealing with the prospect of a potential company relocation.

---

A View from the Managing Partner: Brexit

BDBF's Gareth Brahams considers the political climate some months after the Brexit vote, and what the impact may be on employment law.

---

Your Brexit strategy – How to deal with redundancy

Rolleen McDonnell considers the strategy employees should have when dealing with a potential redundancy in the wake of Brexit.

---

Brexit – What (Theresa) May happen now?

The UK has voted to leave the EU, but what now? BDBF consider where things currently stand and what we may expect in the future post-Brexit.

---

Brexit and the Premier League: No more Bale-outs?

“Too many foreigners in the English game” has been cited by the Brazilian football legend Carlos Alberto as a reason for the English national side’s poor showings in international tournaments. Could Brexit give more English-born players a chance to play in the Premier League?

---

Brexit: The employment law implications

On 23 June 2016, British voters will determine whether the UK will leave the EU (also known as 'Brexit'). Given that many UK employment rights are in some way derived from European law, what consequences would leaving the EU have on employment law?